Keynote Speaking & Executive Masterclasses

Talks on what technology decisions do to the people on the other side of them.

Formats
Keynote, masterclass, offsite session

Duration
Thirty minutes to half a day

Audience
Conferences, boards, leadership teams

Commercial basis
Fixed fee plus travel

Sound familiar?

- The conference needs a technology keynote that is not a vendor pitch.
- The offsite needs a session that changes the questions executives ask, not just the slides they have seen.
- The board wants to understand AI without being sold a platform by the person explaining it.

The only measure of a keynote that matters is whether people use it the following week.

How it runs

We know we can. Should we?

- Plan. A call beforehand, to shape the session around the audience.
- Prepare. For the room, not recycled. Board sessions built around the live agenda.
- Follow the question. Through design reviews, procurement, board approvals and AI governance.
- Take it home. Three questions that fit inside any approval process.

What changes

Before		After
Slides the audience has already seen.	→	Questions people start asking differently.
A vendor pitch in keynote form.	→	No platform or product behind the talk.
A recycled deck.	→	A session prepared for the room.
Forgotten by the journey home.	→	Used in approval meetings the following week.

Done before

First non-IBM person to present at IBM's Distinguished Engineers Global Leadership event.
Globally streamed

Wired magazine roundtable on the move from Communications to Digital Service Provider.
Telecoms

3 questions from the current keynote, and a clear view of what it costs when nobody asks them.
We know we can. Should we?

One conversation.

No obligation. The right fit matters more than the right brochure.
