AI Board Briefing

What the board is actually authorising when it says yes to AI, in one prepared half-day.

Format
Half-day board session, prepared

Location
Boardroom or remote, UK

Output
Written summary within the week

Commercial basis
Fixed fee

Sound familiar?

- AI is on the board agenda because it is everywhere else. Pilots are running and vendors are presenting.
- Somewhere in the organisation, someone has already connected company data to a model.
- The board is being asked to authorise a direction it has not had a fair chance to understand.

A vendor's view or a consultancy's framework won't tell the board what it is actually authorising.

How it runs

Nothing recycled from another client. Nothing for sale in the room.

- Prepare. Current AI activity, strategy papers and regulatory exposure, reviewed first.
- The session. Half a day with the board, built around your agenda.
- The summary. What was discussed, decided and left open, within the week.
- The questions. A set for the board to put to the executive team at every future AI decision.

What the session covers

- What to deploy, and what not to
- Under what controls
- Who owns the risk
- What to ask the executive team

What changes

Before		After
Approving recommendations.	→	Understanding the trade-offs being authorised.
A vendor's view of the risk.	→	A plain assessment of where the real exposure sits.
A discussion nobody can point back to.	→	A written record of what was decided and what remains open.
Oversight that is hard to evidence.	→	Oversight you can show was informed and independent, to a regulator, an insurer or an acquirer.

What this draws on £800m of potential value identified from new data capabilities, forming the investment case put to the business.

Telecoms

Approved at board level: organisation-wide strategies for data and AI, answerable to an Audit and Risk Committee.
Telecoms

0 items for sale. An innovation day for senior government digital leaders had no sales agenda, and new capabilities followed across key functions.
Central government

One conversation.

No obligation. The right fit matters more than the right brochure.

Book a call →

nc@neilcatton.com · www.neilcatton.com/service-ai-board-briefing.html